Clifton Town Meeting

(US-77-7)

INTRODUCTION

1977

The Records

Dating from 1961 to 1977, the records of the Clifton Town Meeting (CTM) were created by the organization's Board of Trustees, its various committees and officers, other neighborhood and community councils, and various Cincinnati governmental bodies. The Clifton Town Meeting records illustrate the varied activity of the Clifton neighborhood, the evolution and development of a community organization and its relationship to the larger urban community of Cincinnati. In particular, the records reveal the origins and problems of neighborhood-controlled community planning, the prospective uses of zoning, the various attempts to preserve the image of Clifton's nineteenth-century "village" past (in one case, via retention of gas lighting), and the existing traffic and education conditions of the Clifton community during the 1960s and 1970s. Also, the records highlight the development of other Cincinnati neighborhood and community councils during this period.

The records of the Clifton Town Meeting were accessioned by the Special Collections Department of the University of Cincinnati Library in 1977. Periodically, other materials dated from 1977 will be deposited in the Department and increase the scope of the present collection. The Clifton Town Meeting records are part of the University of Cincinnati's Urban Studies Collection of manuscripts and archival material.

There are no restrictions as to access and use placed on the Clifton Town Meeting records.

The Clifton Town Meeting

During the 1960s, urban America seemed to be confronted with a series of crises that threatened it with destruction. Levels of crime and industrial pollution appeared to multiply yearly and ravage the social and visual environment. Transportations and urban core housing deteriorated with alarming rapidity. Even efforts to renew the city had unfortunate consequences: multimillion-dollar economic improvements did not equally benefit the diverse communities residing in the city's core area. The American city thus seemed an unstable governmental unit, decadent and self-destructive, a decaying remnant of the first half of the twentieth-century.¹

Catalyzed by this sense of urgency, the Clifton Town Meeting was established in the spring of 1961 to be a community organization dedicated to preserving the Clifton residential suburb as a "desirable neighborhood" of Cincinnati. The Clifton Town Meeting further seeks to promote the cohesiveness of the neighborhood and community, though it advertises to other sections of the city the opportunities for "gracious living" in Clifton.

Cincinnati's 1961 plan to renovate the Avondale-Corryville area was one primary factor in the creation of the Clifton Town Meeting. At that time, Clifton members of the Cincinnati chapter of the League of Women Voters conducted a thorough study of the city's renewal plan, and in April 1961, this group met with Charles Stamm, Director of Urban Development for Cincinnati, in order to discuss the Avondale renovation project and its relation to Clifton. Stamm elaborated on what he saw as a need for the creation of a semi-governmental neighborhood organization that would represent Cincinnati's various suburbs and express their communities' interests and needs to city council. Stamm expressed hope that such organizations could assist the city in devising and implementing its renewal plans. Thus, Stamm's comments proved influential and encouraging to the women of the League, for they "decided to take a look at Clifton as a residential community."

However, the principal factor in the creation of the Clifton Town Meeting revolved around the city's traffic plans for Clifton and the construction of Interstate-75 through Cincinnati. During the early 1960s, the city began to complete its portion of the federal interstate highway that would extend from upper Michigan to mid Florida. In planning the route of this thoroughfare, the city originally proposed to direct it through the suburb of Clifton (via Clifton Avenue from a Spring Grove Avenue interchange), into the downtown core area, and thence to the riverfront bridges and Kentucky. In that manner, city planners anticipated the creation of a freeway system inside the city, not around it, though doing so would bisect certain neighborhoods via widened streets and increased automobile traffic.

During May 1961, some Clifton residents objected to the physical desecration such a highway route would bring to their community. Charging that the plan would permanently dissolve the physical and aesthetical integrity of the Clifton community, as well as devalue property and trigger a wholesale shift of one portion of Cincinnati's population to the semi-rural areas of Hamilton County, this group began to organize the Clifton Town Meeting. On May 4th, a steering committee was formed and charted the path toward establishing the Clifton Town Meeting. Participants included residents of Clifton, some affiliated with the University of Cincinnati's Community Planning Department, and a representative from the city planning firm of Landislas Segoe Associates². By September, this steering committee conducted a community meeting, attended by some five hundred and fifty Clifton residents, and so the Clifton Town Meeting began to function as a community-welfare organization and fight city hall.

Throughout the 1960s, Clifton Town Meeting was kept busy by many community problems, stemming from both Clifton residents and city government. Cincinnati's periodic attempts to remove all obsolete lighting in the city, including Clifton's gas lights, provoked the Clifton Town Meeting to defend its community and try to preserve the remnants of Clifton's "village" history. Between 1961 and 1977, the city and Clifton Town Meeting conducted an ongoing battle as to whether the gas lights should be financed by the city—and thereby be removed due to high maintenance costs—or whether their financial responsibilities should be accorded to property owners. Some Clifton residents even suggested that the city had to maintain the lights, a stipulation emanating from the Clifton-Cincinnati annexation agreement of 1896. By 1977, the gaslights issue was still burning in Clifton, as well as in other city neighborhoods that possessed them.

Zoning as a tool for shaping the social patterns of the community was another popular concern of Clifton residents and the Clifton Town Meeting. Desirous of preserving the Clifton neighborhood as one of “single-family houses”—consequently occupied primarily by middle-class, married persons—the Clifton Town Meeting crusaded to better Clifton by zoning. Though they denied that racial exclusiveness was an objective of periodic zoning activity, the Clifton Town Meeting zoning plans sometimes appeared as a bulwark against community migration, especially Cincinnati’s Black neighborhoods. At any rate, zoning was a sine qua non of the Clifton Town Meeting of the period 1961-1969.

Paralleling the city’s activity of 1948, the Clifton Town Meeting attempted to create a master plan for the Clifton community, and though the period between 1961 and 1975 witnessed several attempts to create general interest in a long-range plan, only in 1973-1974 did planning enthusiasm grow sufficiently strong to prompt any action. In cooperation with graduate students from the University of Cincinnati’s Department of Community Planning, the Clifton Town Meeting conducted a survey of Clifton’s community needs and priorities with respect to remaining a desirable residential suburb of Cincinnati. In spring 1974, the graduate students revealed the results of this survey, and the Clifton Town Meeting called for an intensive study of Clifton’s existing conditions and its interests for community life during the next generation. As the Clifton Town Meeting remarked, “Despite Clifton’s long history of doing its own community planning, too often Clifton planning was piecemeal and reactive to forces not of the community’s own initiative. The CTM Board of Trustees decided to begin a longterm community planning process for Clifton that would be comprehensive...” The result of the study was The Clifton Community Plan (1976), which again asserted Clifton’s right—as conceived by the Clifton Town Meeting—to define its own community interests and preserve its community heritage. The Clifton Community Plan seemed the logical result of the Clifton Town Meeting’s function as a community-welfare organization, and it was the crowning achievement of the Clifton Town Meeting’s sixteen-year history.

The records of the Clifton Town Meeting consist of those generated by the organization of members thereof and those that were created by other Cincinnati and suburban community organizations and collected by the Clifton Town Meeting. These records span the years 1961-1977, but the bulk of this material covers the years 1961-1968. Only since 1973, with the interest created by the community planning study, does the amount of records preserved show a sharp increase. The Clifton Town Meeting records include the following seventeen series: Creation of the Clifton Town Meeting; Clifton Neighborhood Master Plan, 1961-1976; Board of Trustees material; Correspondence; Membership, Election, and Community Meetings, 1961-1977; Newsletters and News Clippings; Publicity and Promotional material; Clifton Business Community, 1961-1968; and Use and Zoning in Clifton; Schooling in Clifton; Traffic in Clifton; Cincinnati and Suburban Community Organizations, 1961-1975; Publications and Brochures; Photographs and Memorabilia; and Oversize Maps.

The records include various types of material, such as letters, surveys, committee reports, news and publicity items, advertisements, addresses and speech working notes, and secondary publications. Reports, either generated by the Clifton Town Meeting or other Cincinnati community councils, plus correspondence, seem to be the predominant types of material in the Clifton Town Meeting records. Most of the correspondence is between Clifton Town Meeting, or certain members of it, and city government. There is also a large amount of general or miscellaneous correspondence from the Clifton community at large, and, to a degree, it reveals the opinions of the general populace about with regard to such issues as Clifton's racial minorities, housing and zoning disputes, and general complaints about the visual environment. This correspondence reveals other subject concerns of Clifton, such as the future of urban gaslights and the Ludlow business district, which one urban developer wanted to turn into "one big shopping mall." The reports follow similar subject lines and consist primarily of working papers and finished documents.

The records also contain a small amount of material demonstrating Clifton Town Meeting's function as an organizer of community activities and events. While the amount of the material is quite small, it nonetheless demonstrates that Clifton Town Meeting conceived of itself as an organization devoted to creating a cohesive neighborhood, one that was filled with exhibitions of Clifton's accomplishments and talent and exemplified Clifton's community spirit. This series expresses the ordinary activities of a neighborhood, from trimming the Clifton Christmas tree to planting trees on Arbor Day.

Not surprisingly, the predominant theme contained in the Clifton Town Meeting records is the need to preserve Clifton as a "desirable place to live," the overriding function of the Clifton Town Meeting, expressed in nearly every activity of the organization. Consequently, the Clifton Town Meeting records possess abundant informational value in this regard on a variety of subjects—land use and zoning, traffic, neighborhood schools, and lighting needs. Yet in attempting to preserve the Clifton neighborhood, the Clifton Town Meeting revealed what it conceived its primary function and identity was—that of a community government. The evidential value of the records are thus equally as rich and pose an interesting problem for Clifton Town Meeting's history: how can it act like a semi-governmental body for Clifton when its membership is restricted to those who pay dues?

Other collections of material within the Special Collections Department may supplement the Clifton Town Meeting records. The collections of William Jenike and Walter C. Langsam are of possible importance since both were affiliated with Clifton Town Meeting during the 1960s. Then too, the papers of Charles Stamm would be of primary importance in evaluating the reasons for the creation of Clifton Town Meeting. Outside of the University of Cincinnati, the records and archives of Cincinnati city government and various suburban community councils appear of importance in supplementing the Clifton Town Meeting material. The city offices of Safety and Traffic, Urban Development, City Planning Commission, and the Cincinnati School Board might yield some materials and information bearing to the establishment and growth of the Clifton Town Meeting and the problems facing the Clifton community during the 1960s and 1970s. The papers of the various community councils would be helpful for evaluating the interrelationship of Cincinnati's neighborhood representatives and also for judging the success of the Clifton experiment in community "government." Presently, the Special Collections Department is engaged in a plan to secure the records of many community councils and document the growth of urban and suburban Cincinnati and America. Finally, such Cincinnati organizations as the Better Housing League and the League of Women Voters may possess interesting and valuable information on the problems facing Cincinnati's communities over the past fifteen years.

While the records adequately document the function of the Clifton Town Meeting, they do not clearly show how the organization was accepted by the Clifton community as its spokesman. Nor do the Clifton Town Meeting records demonstrate to a great extent the organizations influence on city hall. The move to let community councils help the city formulate its plan was a major development in Cincinnati history of the 1960s. However, the Clifton Town Meeting records must be supplemented by other community council records to evaluate the importance of such a federating process. On the other hand, they may have some relative importance in discerning the origins of decentralization in American government at the city level, a phenomenon that appears in conjunction with the centralizing of government power at the federal level. Social historians, as well as urban historians, would find some value in the Clifton Town Meeting records. They are further useful for documenting the role of women in American government of the twentieth-century. Finally, the records of the CTM are valuable to the organization itself. They provide a clear guide as to its past, its accomplishments, along with shortcomings, and what needs to be done in the future to secure Clifton's identity as a "desirable place to live."

Series Arrangement

The following is the principal arrangement and description of the Clifton Town Meeting records, 1961-1977.

1. CREATION OF THE CLIFTON TOWN MEETING, 1961-1962: arranged alphabetically; containing the Clifton Town Meeting constitutions: 1961-1977; the files of the Steering/Planning Committee, which contain minutes, reports and miscellaneous correspondence; and the hearings of city council in April 1962, regarding the widening of Clifton Avenue for expressway traffic
2. CLIFTON TOWN MEETING—CLIFTON NEIGHBORHOOD MASTER PLAN, 1961-1972: arranged chronologically; containing studies of Clifton needs for community development, the majority of the material being working papers related to the creation of the Clifton Community Plan of 1976; and correspondence between representatives of Landislas Segoe, planning firm, and the Clifton Town Meeting, such latter material comprising the mater plans generated between 1961-1974
3. CLIFTON TOWN MEETING—BOARD OF TRUSTEES: arranged alphabetically; primary contents of this series consisting of officer lists: 1962-1977; definitions of committee functions; financial reports: 1962-1977; minutes of the board: 1973-1975; correspondence with the Board from Clifton residents and city official: 1962-1977; and material concerning the establishment of the Clara Sagmaster Memorial Foundation
4. CLIFTON TOWN MEETING—CORRESPONDENCE: arranged alphabetically and chronologically; the essence of this series consisting of general complaints received by the Clifton Town Meeting from Clifton residents: 1962-1975; general correspondence with city council: 1961-1975; miscellaneous correspondence from Clifton residents and members of other communities (note: this file may be quite useful in determining the various sentiments of Clifton residents toward the Clifton Town Meeting, particularly with regard to some of the problems it was requested to deal with, e.g. “odor nuisance,” and the effectiveness of the Clifton Town Meeting in representing the community’s problems to the city)

5. CLIFTON TOWN MEETING—MEMBERSHIP, ELECTIONS, AND COMMUNITY MEETINGS, 1961-1977: arranged alphabetically; containing the minutes from the annual community meetings: 1961-1965, 1971, 1974; the results from the elections to the Board and to the various offices of Clifton Town Meeting, 1966-1977; and material concerning the growth of membership during the period 1964-1977 in the form of membership lists (note: this material is valuable in charting the social position of the Clifton Town Meeting members and their position within Clifton Town Meeting, with the assistance of William’s Directory: 1966-1977)
6. CLIFTON TOWN MEETING—NEIGHBORHOOD ACTIVITIES AND RELATIONS: arranged alphabetically; containing studies, reports, advertisements, and surveys on the varied neighborhood activities promoted by the Clifton Town Meeting (note: this file is valuable for limning the daily life of Clifton as recorded by the Clifton Town Meeting)
7. CLIFTON TOWN MEETING—NEWSLETTERS AND NEWS CLIPPINGS: arranged chronologically; containing the Clifton Town Meeting Bulletin: 1962-1977 and various news clippings collected by the Clifton Town Meeting: 1961-1974
8. CLIFTON TOWN MEETING—PUBLICITY AND PROMOTIONAL: arranged alphabetically; containing various publicity items, such as radio-television editorials distributed by the Clifton Town Meeting, topics including traffic, schools, and zoning in the Clifton area; also, an interesting booster-type document explaining why a Clifton resident should join Clifton Town Meeting
9. CLIFTON BUSINESS COMMUNITY, 1961-1968: arranged alphabetically; containing the records of the Clifton Town Meeting Business Area Committee: 1961-1965; minutes of the Clifton Business Men’s Meeting: 1967-1968; and lists of Clifton merchants: 1961-1963; mostly generated from sources outside the Clifton Town Meeting therefore useful for determining the problems of the Ludlow Business District during the early to late 1960s
10. GAS LIGHTING IN CLIFTON, 1961-1977: arranged alphabetically; consisting of reports and various studies about the city’s attempts to remove gaslights from residential neighborhoods: 1961-1977; also, some news clippings which document the city’s activities in this area: 1962-1967, 1974-1977; produced in part by members of the Clifton Town Meeting who were not acting in an official capacity for the organization; a large part of which originates from the office of the Cincinnati City Manager

11. LAND USE AND ZONING IN CLIFTON: arranged alphabetically; consisting of four subdivisions: environmental, housing, zoning, and urban renewal; covering the period 1960-1974; mostly in the form of reports or studies, hearings, surveys, correspondence, and maps; much of which reveals the functions of the Clifton Town Meeting in preserving the desirable qualities of a single-family neighborhood; mostly originating from outside the Clifton Town Meeting but also containing the responses of the organization to the problems of zoning changes and urban development of Clifton
12. SCHOOLING IN CLIFTON; arranged chronologically; containing the records of the Clifton Town Meeting Schools Committee and the Parent Teacher Association newsletters of Clifton Elementary School: 1961-1963, 1973-1974
13. TRAFFIC IN CLIFTON; arranged alphabetically and chronologically; containing the records of the Clifton Town Meeting Traffic Committee: 1962-1974; miscellaneous proposals and reports dealing with Clifton traffic conditions: 1961-1967; and correspondence with city officials with regard to traffic in Clifton: 1962-1964; mostly originating from city offices
14. CINCINNATI AND SUBURBAN COMMUNITY ORGANIZATIONS, 1961-1975; arranged alphabetically; containing information collected by the Clifton Town Meeting on various community councils: 1961-1975, and on various Cincinnati organizations, such as the League of Women Voters and the Better Housing League (note: this file is good for documentation of Clifton's growing interrelationship with other similar community organizations and for documentation of the growth of community "government" or the federating process in Cincinnati)
15. PUBLICATIONS AND BROCHURES; arranged alphabetically; containing the secondary publication of the Clifton Town Meeting, concerning the history of Clifton; and the booklet "Clifton: Neighborhood and Community in an Urban Setting: A Brief History," by Henry D. Shapiro and Zane L. Miller, professors of history at the University of Cincinnati
16. PHOTOGRAPHS AND MEMORABILIA; arranged alphabetically; containing various pictures of Clifton Town Meeting officials and Clifton society, life, homes, and landscape; collected by the Clifton Town Meeting and/or given to it; some of which is dated, though a majority of the photographs are snapshot size and undated

17. OVERSIZE MAPS; arranged by map number; collected by the Clifton Town Meeting during its fifteen-year history; (note: consult map container listing for a full description of these maps; however, they are of streets, zoning outlines; and city planning maps; consult container listing for location of maps in special collections)
